Photoshop is available for both Windows and Macintosh. See the end of this chapter for information on purchasing the software and where to get more information. I recommend you create a Photoshop user account and use it, as doing so gives you more power and access to more options. Setting Up a Photoshop File Before starting your Photoshop experience, you need to set up a template for your images. It's easy to get started and to create a custom template. Setting up a new document After you log in to your Photoshop program, you arrive at the user screen. Click the New Document icon in the top left of the work area to open up the New Document dialog box. You can choose the following templates in the Photoshop File drop-down list: Original. This is the initial setting where all your work will start from. It's the same as the original size of the file. Long Original. Long refers to an image's full height. Medium Original. Medium refers to an image's full width. Short Original. Short refers to an image's full height. All Icons. This is a special type of thumbnail image that contains both vertical and horizontal icons in the background. Retina Display. If you're creating an image for a Retina Display-sized image, this setting is for you. The Resize dialog box opens and allows you to set the resolution. You can also choose the following options, as shown in Figure 4-1: 1. Options available for all documents. 2. Original size. 3. Auto-Align. 4. Black and White. 5. Fill Color. 6. Exposure. 7. Gamma. 8. Sharpen. 9. Tint. 10. Dither. 11. Flatten. Figure 4-1: Set your preferences by clicking the Options button. You see the New Document dialog box appear. Choose a name for your new document. You can also add keywords, as shown in Figure 4-2. Figure 4-2: Choose a name for your new document and add keywords. Your new document appears in the work area. The important thing to remember is to set up your document as you wish it to appear in the way you want your finished project to be presented. Former Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, who is battling pancreatic cancer, is "in good spirits," according to her chief of staff. "Chief Justice [John] Roberts called her yesterday, and she was in good spirits," her chief of staff, Wendy Lee Graham, said in a statement on Friday. "Her spirits are high, and she is looking forward to resuming the oral argument calendar," she added. Earlier this week, Ginsburg canceled a fourth public appearance because she had developed a fever. She received a late-April pancreatic cancer diagnosis last month. The 85-year-old, who has been the subject of intense media scrutiny and speculation on her health, was hospitalized in December for pneumonia. "She was admitted to the hospital on Dec. 25, 2019, and discharged on Jan. 7, 2020," according to a statement from the Supreme Court. Ginsburg has had both pancreatic and colon cancer, a lung cancer survivor as well as a survivor of pancreatic cancer before that. Ginsburg made history for being the first woman to ever serve on the Supreme Court, holding the position since 1993. She has had a storied legal career, making her name prominent in women's rights and LGBT rights issues. Democrats have already proposed that the last two female justices, Sonia Sotomayor and Elena Kagan, be appointed to the Supreme Court to ensure there is no conflict of interest if Ginsburg eventually steps down. CLICK HERE TO GET THE FOX NEWS APP Senate Democrats were prepared to sue the Trump administration over the executive order that bars people from seven majority-Muslim countries from entering the U.S. if it goes into effect, sources told The Hill. They are also pushing to end what they call a "national emergency" amid the coronavirus outbreak. The White House said in a statement that the last two days have been "a complete disaster from top to bottom," even though President Trump and Secretary of State Mike Pompeo "have exercised extreme caution and sound judgement in protecting Americans abroad." .card-header.card-header text-header icon(v-icon="fw" small)
