1. If you open an image, a window titled Image Bin opens with a rotating 3-D-looks-like an actual 3D box. The Image Bin or 3D Preview window allows you to see at a glance the size, resolution, format, and file attributes for the image. You can have five image bins open simultaneously. 2. In the Layers Panel (Window > Layers), you see various layers. You usually have a Background layer that shows your image in white. Under the Background layer is your image (in black), which is called the active layer. Over the active layer, you see a transparent layer called the Clip Mask. Click this to activate the clip mask to enable all actions to be applied to the active layer. When you remove the clipping, any effects that you apply to the active layer will be applied to the original. 3. To edit the active layer, double-click it to open the Layers Panel. You can make changes in the Control Panel. It's the top portion of the Layers Panel. Each item is a tool. The tools you can use in the Control Panel are listed on the left, and each tool has a shortcut key. The default shortcut key is shown at the top of the tool. You can change the shortcut key for any tool you like. 4. When you want to edit the entire image, go to View > Quick Selection Tool (Q). When you click on the Quick Selection Tool icon, you see a black square with a white arrow on the top right side. Click and drag to select the entire image. If you click the top right, it will show you the image window, and if you click the bottom right, it will exit image mode.

A possible role for arachidonate metabolism in inhibition of granulocyte function. We examined the ability of cytochrome P-450-dependent metabolites of arachidonate, 5-lipoxygenase-activating protein (BLAP), leukotriene B4 (LTB4), and leukotriene B5 (LTB5), to inhibit cytotoxic activity, the respiratory burst, and migration of human peripheral polymorphonuclear leukocytes (PMN). This was done by utilizing an enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay for the detection of LTB5, and using a sensitive radioreceptor assay for quantitation of LTB5 and LTB4. All of the metabolites strongly inhibited cytotoxic activity in a dose-dependent fashion. When leukotrienes LTB4 and LTB5 were added at concentrations greater than  $10^{-9}$  M, the inhibitory effects were much greater than that of cytochalasin B. In contrast, inhibition of the respiratory burst by cytochalasin B was 10-100-fold greater than that by LTB4 or LTB5. Of the metabolites, BLAP was the most potent inhibitor of PMN migration. We propose that these metabolites of arachidonate may be effective inhibitors of PMN function in vivo. The inhibition of migration may be due to the potent BLAP-mediated inhibition of adhesion as well as an effect on functional activity. ◆аши граждане — как переказ оппозиционного фантазии.
