Have you ever wanted to access the color palettes of some of the best-known design and brand sites? You can easily find out all the primary and secondary colors used in the Google Material Design UI, as well as a palette of colors for specific sections and elements. With Materiallette, it will be as easy as a single mouse click to paste any of the palettes to your clipboard, so you can use them with any UI design tool. You can find a few different pre-made palettes for the Google Material Design in Materiallette, but you can also choose the one that best suits your needs. Now, there's no need to ask your colleagues which color you should choose for your next project.

Features:

- Select between the primary and secondary colors
- Nifty application that puts useful color codes at your disposal
- Easy-to-use utility that does not require installation

Help Desk Description: Want to access, edit, and share files on your computer in the quickest possible way? Use Help Desk. Your files are organized into simple folders, and you can share files by copying them to a USB drive and sharing them with other Help Desk users. Folders, folders everywhere! To use Help Desk, you simply need to open the software, and you will find yourself greeted by a welcome window. It will inform you about which features you can use to help you get the most out of the software. From here you can access the program's various functions, such as adding and viewing files, sharing files on a USB drive, and searching your entire computer for files. Practical and efficient There are three search modes in Help Desk, each with their own characteristics. You can either use the main search window for general searching, or you can search your files by their file name, or type, and by date added. The program can also scan the folders of your entire computer for specific file types, and it will display a list of all the files of a certain type that you find in the folders of the computer. You can add files directly from the program, or you can share them with other users by using your USB drive. You can also create a link to a file on your computer
