[Abdominoplasty--facial growth characteristics and time of appearance]. Since the first operations for abdominoplasty more than 70 years ago, aesthetic procedures of the abdomen are still part of clinical plastic surgery. Despite their frequent indication as a tissue compensatory technique in severe obesity, they also have become an alternative for other plastic procedures. To evaluate the influence of different abdominoplasty techniques on the future facial growth. The authors performed a retrospective analysis of 228 consecutive abdominoplasty procedures. Standard linear measurements were performed on photographs taken pre- and 6 months postoperatively. The data were compared regarding various aspects of the surgical techniques performed: incision, ostectomy, skin, muscle, and fat-grafting. A scar on the upper abdomen with a 4 cm to 6 cm long transverse scar is a cardinal indication for abdominoplasty. This particular incision is associated with a significant vertical and transverse growth. The need for such a large scar can be avoided by a vertical skin incision and a trapezius-aponeurosis-based flap. Skin undermining and harvesting of a dermal graft with a preperforated skin envelope results in a favorable cosmetic outcome. The postoperative facial growth of the lower abdomen takes place later than that of the upper abdomen. The transverse skin incision and a vertical skin incision with an areolar or a dermal flap and autologous skin and/or fat and muscle grafts are suitable and safe procedures for the treatment of severe obesity.Q: Set and get a status from an AR project on github I created a package of React.js using npm and installed it on my server.
