effects in BPV patients have not been documented thus far. Transcranial direct current stimulation (tDCS) is a safe, non-invasive, and increasingly used tool to change brain activity. In previous studies, tDCS has shown mixed effects in terms of improving clinical symptoms in the short or long term, but the results of the available studies are still inconclusive. There are several protocols, but all of them aim at the same target, the prefrontal cortex, mostly by being applied at 2 mA. Since BPV patients often report problems with memory, it is conceivable that tDCS is an interesting tool for improving memory in them. A recent study has demonstrated a positive effect of tDCS on verbal episodic memory in healthy individuals. However, the authors used a too brief stimulation to prove a potentially beneficial effect on memory in BPV. The current study design, in which tDCS was applied for 20 min at a higher intensity of 2 mA for five consecutive days, may be more convincing to prove a potential beneficial effect on memory in BPV. Taken together, the results of our study indicate the feasibility of a study that aims to investigate the efficacy of tDCS on memory and mood in BPV patients. The outcome of such a study might be useful in guiding future studies on the role of the prefrontal cortex in BPV patients. Data Availability Statement {#S6}

In addition, you can create your own effects using actions and scripts. Effects can be used for various types of edits. For example, they can be used to create a textured effect on an image, adjust contrast or lighten or darken an image or combine two images. Q: What are the fundamental properties of a vertex in a triangle? I am confused about how the vertices can be labeled as positive and negative in a triangle. For instance, if we were to label all the vertices counterclockwise starting from the right most and then labeled $a=+1$, $b=-1$, and $c=+1$, what would be the fundamental properties of a vertex? In particular, it seems as if there is a certain relationship between whether we would label a , b or c as positive or negative, but I can't quite see how it works. For instance, if we were to draw the diagram of the dual of the triangle ABC in one dimension, it would look like: If we were to label this however we wish, what would be the relationship between the a and b vertices? Would it be that since b is in the opposite side of a so we would label it negative? But if a is in the opposite side of b then it would be positive. And that doesn't make sense. A: The Vertex a From your figure, there is a line from the vertex a and it turns through b and after c . As a and c are in the same side of b , the line segment ab and bc are both positive. So, a is positive. The Vertex b Similar to a , there is a line segment ab from b to a and through c , so the segment bc is also positive. So b is positive. The Vertex c The line segment from c to
